

Diseases in developing countries

Health problems in developing countries: the most important ones

The most pressing diseases and health problems in developing countries are communicable diseases; principal causes of death are

- HIV/AIDS,
- infections at birth,
- diarrhoeal disease and
- tropical diseases such as malaria

Main contribution to this work:
Maria Beracierta, Maria
Lazkano, Laura Alvarez, Gorka
Lazkano

Diseases in developing countries

Health problems in developing countries: how to solve them

Treating diseases of the developing world involves many factors, including

- the development of effective medicines,
- health systems,
- infrastructure and
- education
- intervention of developed countries and governments

Main contribution to this work:
Maria Beracieto, Maria
Lazkano, Laura Alvarez, Gorka
Lazkano